Speaker: Dr Jared Ng
Psychiatrist & Senior Consultant
Medical Director
Connections MindHealth

What are teenagers really stressed about today? How do you tell the difference between normal ups and downs and something more serious?
In this session for parents of secondary school students, psychiatrist Dr Jared Ng will share insights into what teens face today – from academic pressure and social comparisons to struggles with low mood and anxiety.
He will also touch on common mental health conditions in youth and how parents can support their children with calm and clarity.
The session will include practical suggestions, real examples, and time for questions.

Introducing our Guest Speaker

Jazon graduated with a Master of Counselling from Monash University (Australia), as well as a BA (Hons) in Childhood Studies and Guidance & Counselling from Northumbria University (UK). Jazon is an accredited Triple P (Positive Parenting Programme) Practitioner (up to Level 4), and a certified Signpost (Parenting Programme for Parents with disability young children) trainer. As a Parenting Practitioner, Jazon works with parents from diverse ethnic groups and cultures to empower them in their parenting journey. He conducted Triple P seminar talks, father's talk and largely work with parents on one-to-one parenting consultation. Prior to Fei Yue, Jazon served in both government and social service sectors, working closely with the community. Jazon volunteers as the chairman for a Parent Support Group in his children's school and works closely with the parents and school. Jazon is married with a son and daughter.
